

WAREHOUSING AND LOGISTICS

Scopelitis attorneys understand both the complex legal and practical issues facing companies in the warehouse and logistics industries, including insurers. Our attorneys have extensive experience serving a wide variety of both asset based and non-asset based logistics providers from the traditional property brokers and freight forwarders, to providers of transportation management services, to cross-dock and bonded warehouse operations. We assist clients in every aspect of their business from corporate to transactions to litigation. When litigation arises that involves the storage and handling of any type of product or material, our attorneys have extensive experience in all aspects of warehouse legal liability including property losses, general liability, regulatory compliance, and enforcement of warehousemen liens. In addition, we represent clients' needs in drafting, negotiating and reviewing warehousing and logistics documents, including warehouse receipts, bills of lading, customer and carrier contracts, standard contract terms and conditions, security agreements, and tariffs. Scopelitis attorneys are at the forefront of warehouse and logistics law and regularly participate and present at national warehouse and logistic conferences.
